

Contents

Introduction	1
1. The Return of Sub-Imperialism	13
The political climate in Brazil during the 1970s
Marini and the theory of sub-imperialism
2. Broadening the Ruling Elite.	33
The union trajectory
Unionists in state positions
The role of pension funds
A new class or union capitalism?
3. Building a Strategy.	63
A history of plans and planning
Brazil in 3 Phases: The country's centennial
Centennial goals
Who's who in strategic planning
4. From a Resistance Strategy to a National Defense Strategy	97
The National Defense Strategy
A new military-industrial complex
Behind the nuclear weapon
5. The Reorganization of Brazilian Capitalism	125
The reorganization begins
Petrobras, the crown jewel
Petrobras and the foreign takeover of ethanol
Investment in infrastructure and energy
State and capital

6. Brazilian Multinationals in Latin America	151
The internationalization of Brazilian companies
Foreign investment in Brazil
Green-yellow entrepreneurs
7. The New Conquest of the Amazon	173
Dams in the Amazon
IIRSA: Integration through markets
Winners and losers
8. Relations with Peripheral Countries	201
Paraguay, the weaker neighbor
Bolivia, gas, and soybeans
Ecuador against Brazilian companies
“Strategic alliances”: Argentina and Venezuela
Is Brazil creating its own “backyard”?
9. Toward a New Center and New Peripheries	233
Neither gendarme nor dependent
Ongoing debates
An open scenario
10. Antisystemic Movements in Brazil	251
Stagnation and decline of struggle
The “have-nots”: reconfiguration and change
11. The June 2013 Uprisings	269
Salvador, Florianópolis, Porto Alegre
A new political culture
The Pan American Games as rehearsal
Debating the character of the June mobilizations
Notes	293
Index	343